

The Slovak Republic has one of the most dynamic GDP growth rates in the euro area. In line with the World Bank classification, it is a local leader for effective entrepreneurship; and Slovakia has one of the highest rankings in the total Economic Freedom Index.

Slovakia is a country of skilful, creative and enterprising people, pursuing the historical heritage of significant Slovak scientists and inventors, such as Štefan Banič (parachute inventor), Jozef Murgáš (pioneer in wireless telecommunication), Maxmilián Hell (important astronomer, mathematician and physician), and Aurel Stodola (founder of the vapour and gas turbines theory).

Many Slovak companies have won global recognition thanks to their high-quality products. Slovak companies sell their products in prestigious world markets; and it is clear from the sales that their products are very competitive.
